By a recent census of the school district of Bennington it is shown that the town contains 1,269 school children. This number is 26 less than last year.

The dwelling house of Edward Cleverland, situated just outside Morrisville on the Hyde Park road was destroyed by fire late Monday afternoon. Most of the household goods were saved. There was no insurance on the property, having been recently erected.

About 300 Masons gathered in Rutland on Tuesday to attend the annual meeting of the fourth district Masonic bodies. The visitors are the guests of Center and Rutland lodges. The meeting opened with the exemplification of the Entered Apprentice degree by Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 70 of Poultney. The Fellow Craft degree was conferred by Morning Star Lodge, No. 37 of Poultney. Rev. Henry L. Ballou of Chester, grand lecturer, reviewed the work. Supper was served at Masonic Temple from 6 until 7.30, followed by a reception to the grand lodge officers.

The final orders for the annual encampment of the department of Vermont, G. A. R., at Burlington Feb. 26, have been issued by Commander Senator H. Wood of St. Albans, and state that H. W. Post of Post, No. 14 of Rutland is appointed to the committee on credentials in place of Henry A. Wheeler who is unable to attend. The following will be the order of business: Opening of the Encampment; roll call of officers; report of the committee on credentials; roll call of representatives; report of officers; appointment of committees; reception and reference of communications from posts; reception and reference of communications from members; reports of committees; unfinished business; new business; election of officers and representatives to the national encampment; installation of officers.

Rode Hard to Fall Lynchers.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 2.—Deputy Sheriff Magee arrived here Wednesday night with Tom Fifer, negro, father-in-law of Will Robinson who shot and killed Sheriff Robertson and escaped. A mob had formed to hang Fifer, but the deputy drove forty miles, met a special train carrying a guard under Governor Vandeman, and landed his prisoner in jail.

A Gentler Reminde

Not long before the close of the Civil War, when Gen. Lee had his headquarters near Petersberg, a young man was sent to him with a message from his son, Gen. William H. F. Lee, whose cavalry command was then stationed at G—, about forty miles distant. The message was a verbal one, to the effect that the son would join the father with his entire cavalry the next morning by 9 o'clock at Rowantown Creek, a point below Petersberg on the Weldon Railroad. The young man, now long past middle life, tells the story himself.

"I was like a boy, the youngest and last appointed on the staff of our gallant commander; and in addition to the novelty of it, there were two other reasons which made the night's ride the most exciting experience I had ever known—Gen. Lee was my idol, and I had never seen him."

"I had to ride fast, and when at last I left my drooping horse of Gen. Lee's tent door and was ushered into his presence, I was almost overcome with fatigue and heat, though too excited to realize it. Gen. Lee sat at a table, over some midnight work. He stopped writing for a moment and rose to receive me, while I saluted, more than realizing my boyhood's ideal in the commanding presence in which I stood at last. Almost faint, as I said, I forgot myself and my errand and seemed to see the object of my admiration through a sort of mist, like a dim picture looking out of a dark canvas. Suddenly I became conscious that Gen. Lee was asking me my errand.

"I had been sent by your son, Gen. William H. F. Lee, I began, mechanically, 'to tell you that he will meet you with his cavalry tomorrow morning by 9 o'clock'—and then I stopped.

"At what point will he meet me?" asked Gen. Lee.

"It was a simple question, but the cold sweat started out of my hands and face as he asked it and things grew dimmer than ever.

"I have forgotten, General," I said, as soon as I could get my voice, it seemed to come from a hollow under my feet somewhere.

"Gen. Lee looked at me in surprise; then, as if to relieve my embarrassment, he took a turn across the tent. 'Can't you think?' he said, as I remained silent. I tried to go over the places in the country around. I could not think of one. The General stood still again before me, trying to think himself.

"Was it Ream's Station?" he asked.

"No, General, it wasn't that," I said, beginning to take a little courage.

"Or Hatchet Run?"

"No, General."

"Was it Stony Creek?"

"No, sir, it was as blank as ever. Maybe it was Rowantown Creek," he ventured again, after a pause. I drew a long breath; the mist faded from my eyes.

"Yes, General," I said, "it was Rowantown Creek" and waited to be dismissed with the unlimited contempt I deserved.

"What did you leave G—?" was the next question.

"At 11 o'clock," I replied. It was then half past three.

"You must be tired. Orderly!" he called. The orderly appeared at the tent door. "Take this course and see that he has some supper and a place to sleep." I saluted, and went out with the orderly. I had the best meal that night—or rather that morning—that I had eaten in many a day, and dropped asleep as soon as my head touched the sheltered grass which served as my bed in the tent assigned me.

"When I woke there was no tent over me. The sun was shining in my face. The field was clear. Not a vestige of the encampment but its refuse was left. On one of the forked prays which had upheld the tent hung my knapsack. I examined it. It was filled with food. Tied to a tree near by was my horse, saddled and bridled, and showing a very dainty appetite for grass. I seized some of the contents of my knapsack, and eating as I rode, galloped on toward Rowantown Creek.

"It is needless to say that in the struggle which followed during the next few days over the Weldon Railroad I fought as I had never fought before, for the man before whom I stood as a fool and, but for his own thoughtfulness, the
